LABOUR WHITE PAPERS, No. 44.

THE "NATIONAL" GOVERNMENT

AN ANALYSIS prepared by the Labour Research Department, 60, Doughty Street, London, W.C.1.

December, 1931. One Penny.

INTRODUCTION.

The purpose of this pamphlet is to present in an easily accessible form the results of the General Election of October, 1931. The Labour Research Department has made an exhaustive analysis of the Election returns and the following tables provide not only an easy guide to the Election figures, but an armoury of facts for the student, propagandist and active worker who is conducting a struggle against the "National" Government and capitalism in every form.

The first table given below sets out the distribution of seats in the new Parliament, and shows for purposes of comparison, the state of Party representation at the dissolution of the old Parliament.

A big increase in Conservative seats is recorded, representing a net gain of no less than 208 seats. This gain has been obtained largely at the expense of the Labour Party, which sustained a net loss of 213 seats.

In table V we show the number of votes recorded for the different parties in the election. The results are shown for each of the sections into which it is customary to divide the constituencies.

In analysing the results of the 1929 Election (see L.R.D. MONTHLY CIRCULAR, July, 1929) we selected certain areas in order to show certain trends. Similar figures for the same areas in the recent Election are set out in Tables II and III. In the article referred to above the reasons for having selected these areas were given in detail. They are summarised below.

London is again taken as being a special problem ; (a) as including many of the newer industries; (b) as, owing to its relatively enormous size and varied industrial nature it has no such corporate life from a working-class point of view as even the largest of the northern towns or areas such as Liverpool or Manchester or the Midlands; and, finally, (c) because—and this is all important—it has a definitely corporate life from the capitalists' point of view as being the centre of their Empire.

Manchester is taken as a typical mixed industrial town.

The area of South Wales that has been taken is as far as possible, the coal mining area, in order to emphasise what effect the recent crisis has had upon the consciousness of the working class and particularly the miners.

Sussex has been taken as definitely the most pronounced example of a contrast to the selected area of South Wales, for it is the play garden of British Imperialism. To this county enormous numbers of capitalists and the hangers-on of the capitalist machine gravitate.

Lastly, Norfolk, an agricultural county, but of a different nature from Sussex is taken. In this county the first and continuous organisation of agricultural workers was effected and the agricultural workers of the county have had their full share of conflicts with the employers.

It is in Norfolk that capitalist large-scale farming has been more extensively developed than in any other county.

In every area the Conservative vote has increased, including South Wales where Labour did best of all. The table showing the percentage of total poll reveals the position more clearly. In Manchester, where in 1929 Labour substantially increased its percentage of the poll, there was a big reduction in Labour votes in 1931.

A commentary upon the Electoral system is supplied by Tables IV and V showing the disproportion between the number of votes given for the various parties and the number of seats gained. The Conservatives who polled a little more than half the votes won over three-quarters of the seats. Labour got only 8.5 per cent. of the seats in the New House for 30.7 per cent. of the votes, while the National Labour candidates for 1½ per cent. of the votes received over 2 per cent. of the seats.

In Table VI we show the Parliamentary representation of large towns and areas, together with the decline in the Labour vote. The table speaks for itself, although care must be exercised in its use by reference to the footnotes.

An analysis of the social composition of the new Parliament reveals certain new features. In particular there is a further development of tendencies fairly well marked in recent elections. We refer to the increasing tendency of the aristocracy and those who have close connections by birth or education with this group in bourgeois society to interest themselves in politics. And still further the number of those whose training has been of a character which instils into them the necessity for the defence of the present social structure, shows a big increase.

The number of company directors is large if a comparison is made with the last Parliament, but account must be taken of the huge decline in the number of Labour M.P.'s. The number of company directors in successive Parliaments is shown in Table VII.

Below we set out details concerning capitalist interests, training, education, etc., of members of the present House of Commons. The data should be read, bearing in mind the qualifications made in dealing with the two preceding tables.

The arrangement of the appended material containing the names of some 258 Members of Parliament, is as follows :—

Names are in alphabetical order, and are followed by the constituency and party in brackets. Where directorships, names and/or numbers, are given, these have been obtained from the Directory of Directors, 1931. Other information : e.g., family connections, official positions, education, occupation, etc., has been taken from Who's Who, 1931, and The Times House of Commons Guide, 1931. In order to save space a number of abbreviations have been used, the most important being :—

ch. = chairman.	incl. = including.
